TACOMA BOYS FIGHT WAY INTO THE OLYMPICS

Soldiers Have To Find New Excuses Not To Vote

FORT LEWIS, WA.--The Soldier who doesn't vote in the upcoming general election will have to use another excuse besides, "I didn't know about it," or "nobody told me how."

Next week (July 24-30) is Military Registration Week with a goal of insuring that every eligible person receives a voting application form.

Voting officers appointed by each company-sized unit will personally contact each soldier. A Federal Post Card Application Form (FPCA) will be handed the individual and its use explained. The form is mailed to home-state election officials to register and request absentee ballots.

Married men will receive additional FPCA forms for wives and voting-age youngsters.

Special busses will leave twice daily from the Main PX to transport to the County-City Building in Tacoma soldiers, dependents and employees who are eligible to vote in Washington and wish to register.

Unit voting officers advise troops on registration and absentee procedure and supply available information on sources of partisan literature. However, they are required to carefully avoid any action which could be construed as an attempt to influence an individual's voting preference.

School District Forestry Camp

Students are now being sought for a ten-day summer forestry camp at the Tacoma School District's Lincoln Tree Farm, Harold Berndt, Director of extended education, announced.

The class, open to all high school boys and girls, is scheduled for July 26-August 8.

Students, who can earn one high school credit, will spend two weeks in the 400-acre classroom learning forestry techniques and conservation.

Berndt said enrollment for the class is limited and interested students should contact the summer school principal at their high school, or the Central Administration office of extended education as soon as possible.

A $25 registration fee covers daily transportation costs from Tacoma.

Dennis Armstrong at 112 lbs. David Armstrong at 106 lbs, Ray Seales at 139 lbs, and Dale Grant at 147 lbs.

From the Downtown Tacoma Boys' Club Boxing Team represented Tacoma at Fort Worth Texas. Dale Grant who fought in the 147 lbs bracket fought a terrific defense against Larky Carlisle, but lost in a split decision. This is Dale's first year at the weight division and we are expecting bigger and better things as he is steadily improving on our Boxing Team at the Downtown Tacoma Boys' Club.

Dennis Armstrong who made his day-view for the first time this year at the Olympic trails also represented himself very strongly but lost in a split decision against Gregroy Lewis. This is also Dennis's first year competing as a senior boxer and we are also expecting great things from him in the future.

David Armstrong at 106 lbs and Ray Seales at 139 lbs fought their way through-out their weight division and came out on top and is now taking that next step toward being a member of the United States Boxing Team. They are proceeding to Bear Mountain, New York where the final decision will be determine on who will represent the United States on the Olympic games in Munich Germany.

We the members of the Downtown Boys' Club and the Parents' Club members and the Board of Directors wish Davey Armstrong and Ray Seales all the Luck in the World.

Y.E.S. News

As youth, we repeatingly hear the statement; "Stay in School and get a good Education." Usually this advice goes in one ear and out the other. That's fine for a person who wants to loaf all of his or her life away. To those that want to accomplish a particular goal, in a particular field, whether it range from a janitor to the "President of the United States," we need the education. Continue to take courses that will benefit you in becoming full qualified for the business world today. Sure it's hard to find employment even with education, but you have the assurance that you will be considered for employment ahead of the person without an education. Nobody wants to hire a "dummy." Employers want to hire people with knowledge and training. Always keep in mind your goals and the belief that; "I am going to be somebody." But, in order for me to be somebody, I'll need the necessary education.

In interviewing a portion of the Y.E.S. staff, I found that they agree with the preceding statement. Jeanyne Jackson, a junior attending Mt. Tahoma High School states, "I believe I'm somebody, but to make myself a better person I'll need an education. Don't mess a life time stay in school." Also Debbie Flom, a junior attending Mt. Tahoma High School states, "I feel if you want a better job you should stay in school, because you will need all the education you can get."

To all the youth everywhere, if you want a good job, get a good education. So come on, community let's get together. Help mold a man. Give a kid a job this summer.

Pacific Northwest Bell Asked For Higher Rates In Wash State

Pacific Northwest Bell today asked the Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission for higher rates in Washington State, according to Harry Holloway, PNB Vice President and General Manager for Washington.

If approved, only about half of the requested $44.9 million increase would be retained by the company after federal income taxes, he said.

In announcing the filing, Holloway said: "In the last three years PNB has had to ask for two rate increases to offset inflation. Both cases we were authorized only about half of what we asked for and needed. We now have no alternative but to ask again."

PNB's filing asks that approximately $14.9 million of the total amount be allowed to go into effect immediately to bring the company's earnings to the level authorized by the WUTC last December, as well as to offset the cost of 1972 wage increases negotiated with unions last year.

The immediate increase would affect only in-state long distance calls, service connection, move and change and other "one-time-only" charges. The cost of local monthly service would not increase until Commission hearings on the total amount are completed. At that time, permanent new rates could be authorized by the Commission.

Unemployment rate shows biggest drop since 1965

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The black unemployment rate dropped from 10.7 per cent to 9.4 last month, leading the biggest month-to-month drop in seven years as virtually every category of worker found jobs in a record June, according to the Labor Department.

The overall unemployment rate stood at 5.5 per cent, down from 5.9 per cent in May. It marked the lowest jobless percentage in 20 months.

Although the number of workers reached a record 81.7 million, the number still looking for jobs also rose, by 1.1 million in June, to 4.4 million.

Another 91,000 persons dropped out of the labor force in June. Their numbers were not considered in computing the unemployment rate, announced Friday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS).

The Labor Department also reported Friday that wholesale food prices climbed 1 per cent from May to June. Rising food prices, caused largely by a 4.7 per cent in livestock prices, were foreshadowed by an Agriculture Department report last week.

BLS said the 5.5 per cent unemployment rate was seasonally adjusted to compensate for the normal big influx of students into the labor force during the summer vacation. The influx, however, was below average for previous years.

Officials said the number of teen-age workers was the lowest in two years, but their unemployment rate declined from 15.7 per cent in May to 14.5 per cent in June.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of Congress' Joint Economic Committee, said the 5.5 per cent rate was an "illusion." He gave the number of youth workers as an example, saying that 160,000 of them dropped out of the labor force from frustration.

Proxmire said the unemployment rate was actually unchanged among breadwinners and the June deviation for all workers would show up in months to come.

BLS said unemployment rates for married men 2.9 and household heads, 3.6, were the same in May and June.

The overall drop of 0.4 per cent was the biggest monthly decline since the buildup of U.S. troops in Vietnam began in 1965. The 5.5 rate was the lowest since 5.4 in September, 1970.

Training programs fail to ease unemployment

By JAMES F. SOUTHERLAND

WASHINGTON (NBNS) — Black Americans shared very little in the significant drop in unemployment during June, giving support to the contention of NAACP Labor Director Herbert Hill that many federal job training programs are a waste of money as far as blacks are concerned.

Hill criticized especially the failure of Labor Department efforts to increase the number of blacks in union apprenticeship and job training programs.

Speaking at the annual NAACP convention in Detroit, he said these federally-subsidized labor training programs have produced few full-fledged minority journeymen because of labor union racism.

He cited a Chicago program which promised blacks more than 4,000 jobs and cost $711,737. When audited later by the Labor Department, the program was found to have placed fewer than 100 persons in a year and a half.

Hill said on-the-job training programs are more effective in getting blacks into construction work. Three-fourth of all construction workers become journeymen through on-the-job training not apprenticeship, he said.

The NAACP National Labor Director said the apprenticeship training program was an example of "government subsidized racism" because of the anti-black attitudes of construction unions.

The latest Labor Department figures on unemployment support the contention that racist job patterns prevent blacks from benefiting from rising economic activity in the country.

The Department reports that the nation's unemployment rate dropped from 5.9 per cent in May to 5.5 per cent in June, the lowest rate since October 1970.

Black joblessness showed a much smaller decline, anl continued at almost double the national unemployment rate.

The unemployment rate for blacks eased from 9.6 per cent in April to 9.4 per cent. The rate for whites dropped from 5.4 per cent to 5 per cent.

HOME BUYER CLINIC

By John W. Warren
President
American Land Title Association

Don't Overlook Precautions

For most of us, the purchase of a home is the largest investment we will ever make. That's why advance precautions to safeguard real estate ownership are so important. An excellent example of these protective measures is a title search right down to the day your transaction is completed.

Warren

A title search and owner's title insurance are a good idea, no matter how reliable and honest the seller of a home may seem. The following case from the files of a title insurer will illustrate.

Recently, a young couple became interested in purchasing a home and assuming the existing mortgage. The price was quite attractive, and the seller cooperative. In conversation, the seller told the couple there was no need to call in a title company because he already had an owner's title insurance policy he would give to them. The seller added there was an FHA-insured loan on the home and told the couple they could be sure the government wouldn't back a loan on property with a bad title.

What the seller didn't tell the couple was that his owner's title insurance would not protect them at all. It only safeguarded him against title hazards dating up to the time he purchased the property — and did not protect him or the couple against subsequent problems of his own making.

A title search subsequently was ordered in connection with the couple's pending transaction and revealed that:

— Three federal tax liens had been filed against the seller

— There was an unpaid paving assessment against the property

The sale was never completed and the couple was spared serious difficulty and possible financial loss.

Taking proper precautions to see that your interests are protected is highly recommended before you purchase a home or other real estate. That includes the purchase of owner's title insurance, which always is based on an up-to-date title search.

Free home buyer guidelines may be obtained by writing American Land Title Association, Box 566, Washington, D.C.

NEW U.S. ATTORNEY GENERAL SPEAKS OUT ON CIVIL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON - Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, the new head of the U.S. Department of Justice, is firmly committed to securing equal rights for all Americans.

The 48-year-old Arizonan, who was sworn in as the 68th Attorney General on June 12 after serving three years as the No. 2 man in the Department under John N. Mitchell, has frequently spoken out in support of civil rights guarantees for Blacks and other minority groups.

"Racial discrimination is wrong. It is morally wrong. It is legally wrong. It is socially wrong. It must be substantially eliminated if we are to survive as a nation of free and independent people," Kleindienst has declared.

In his first meeting with newsmen as Attorney General, Kleindienst discussed the need to establish a national policy to eliminate discrimination so that every citizen is accorded "equality not only of opportunity but equality of hope and equality of promise."

His speeches have carried this civil rights theme:

"We know that in the civil rights field, over-optimism can be a pitfall, that we cannot rest on yesterday's gains, that there is still a long road ahead. And we in the Justice Department are making maximum use of the legal vehicles we have been given to drive down that road."

Kleindienst has repeatedly cited the Justice Department's record of enforcement of civil rights laws in the past three years, particularly in the areas of education, employment and housing.

He has said that the Justice Department will continue to press for programs like the Philadelphia Plan to "rid the land of discrimination in employment."

Regarding school desegregation, Kleindienst believes that national standards should be established "as a great step forward toward the elimination of racism in our country."

"We are committed to quality education for every child in this land," he has said. "What we are opposed to is the Federal imposition of artificial means of achieving an artificial racial balance."

Kleindienst has also called for the recruitment of more blacks on police forces and has cited the need for improved training of law enforcement officers in community relations.

The new Attorney General, a member of the National Urban League since 1950, is particularly pleased with the work of black civic groups such as Delta Sigma Theta Sorority in the rehabilitation of federal prisoners.

Sorority members are serving as volunteer counselors in a pilot project to provide intensive guidance and vocational training for 300 women in federal and state prisons before their release.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT

During June, the Justice Department filed nine suits to increase employment opportunities for blacks, Spanish-surnamed Americans and other minorities.

Suits were filed against three trucking companies, three utilities, six local unions and a chemical company.

Those named in the suits were Terminal Transport Company of Atlanta; Lee Way Motor Freight Company of Oklahoma City; East Texas Motor Freight Company of Dallas; Piedmont Natural Gas Company of Charlotte, North Carolina; Detroit Edison Company; Louisville Gas and Electric Company; four building trades union locals in Mobile, Alabama; and BASF Wyandotte Corporation, of Wyandotte, Michigan.

In addition, three consent decrees were filed, settling Justice Department actions by making more jobs and opportunities for advancement available to minority members.

The decrees were obtained in negotations with Piedmont, three building trades locals in New Orleans, and Elevator Constructors Local 3 in St. Louis.

FAIR HOUSING

One new housing discrimination suit and four consent decrees in fair-housing cases were filed by the Justice Department in June.

A major home builder in New Orleans was charged in a civil suit with steering black and white prospective home buyers to separate subdivisions in which their races were predominant.

Consent decrees prohibiting defendants from engaging in racially discriminatory housing practices were entered in cases involving the developers of a recreational land community in West Virginia, a real estate company in Houston, Texas, and owners of mobile home parks near Orlando, Florida, and Wilmington, North Carolina.

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS

Suits were filed against three restaurants and a gas station in Alabama and Georgia during June to require them to provide equal service to blacks.

VOTING RIGHTS

The Attorney General objected to a new state law establishing numbered seats for most of the school boards, county councils and municipal governing bodies in South Carolina.

The system of electing members to specific seats would dilute black voting strength, the Attorney General concluded in a review of the law required by the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

During the first half of 1972, the Attorney General objected to 30 changes in election laws because of their racial purpose or effect.

BLACK BUSINESSMAN REACH FOR SHARE OF MOVIE PROFITS

"Super Fly" fulfills the standard Hollywood legend about the movie that is pulled through against impossible odds and becomes a big success. The film was made in circumstances that would have, and have in fact, defeated many other productions, and upon completion was grabbed up by Warner Bros. for immediate release.

The money for "Super Fly" came from 18 black people who had never invested in a film, but did so this time because they liked what the script had to say. Among the 18 were dentists, financiers, businessmen in the black community but also pimps, madams and drug-dealers. Even so, there was not enough money and "Super Fly" had to suspend shooting a couple of times because there was no raw film stock to work with.

The producer, Sig Shore, had made hundreds of television programs but not a feature-length movie; "Super Fly" was his first. The director Gordon Parks, Jr., had never directed a film. The author, Phillip Fenty, never written a screenplay. The female lead, Sheila Frazier, had never given a paid performance either in a play or a film. Most of the technical crew were trainees from a Harlem project which is developing skills among young blacks.

The film was shot at the height of winter in locations which were 50 per cent outdoor. The company had to contend not only with shortage of money, good weather and inexperience on the part of numerous members, but the crowds that always collect at a movie in the making. The worst of these were mobs of kids who got in the way of the camera, tripped over the cables, interfered with acting and directing. When objection was made, they would reply that it was their block, and before long adults would step into the confusion to defend the kids. Power for lights and camera was simply taken from the nearest light-pole. Often the company had no permit from the city authorities to shoot, but shot anyway. Indoor locations were usually provided by friends of friends, which meant long treks to various parts of the city. Filming outdoors was done in lip-synch, which meant that random sounds got into the track and had to be contended with later. Movie compaies who might be able to furnish money for completion insisted on seeing what had already been filmed, but the producer refused to show his footage. The actors had to wait for their money.

Somehow, "Super Fly" was finished and edited. A noted black tunesmith composed a score. The film was shown to Warner Bros. That company took "Super Fly" on the spot, now is interested in backing more movies by the rugged group which pulled together "Super Fly."

Fort Lewis' 1ST Signal Group Is Mustering Support Doomed To Die Within A Year

FORT LEWIS, WA.--Seven-year-old Dani Brown, the little Seattle girl doomed to die within a year unless $30,000 for a kidney transplant is raised, has a new ally the U.S. Army.

Fort Lewis' 1st Signal Group is mustering support from individuals, groups and organization, asking them to gather returnable beer bottles and aluminum cans.

First Lieutenant Ken McCandless, information officer for the Signal Group, is spearheading the two-week campaign. Officers' NCO and Rod & Gun Clubs have offered to save bottles and cans, and a Girl Scout troop will collect them door-to-door, plus donating pennies. He said the NCO Wives Club has pledged more than $180.

The first sergeant of U.S. Army Garrison's headquarters company, Don Sorenson, promised the empties from beer served at his dining facility's Friday evening meals, and Captain John Fiebiger, Company B. of the 9th Division's 709th Maintenance Battalion, said his men had offered to contribute cash.

Another soldier, Specialist 5 Dwight Westmore of the 2nd Military Police Group, called up McCandless the evening he heard about Dani's plight, to say he had a lot of empty beer bottles.

"Bring 'em over," said the Lieutenant.

Fifteen minutes later the bottle collection campaign was off to a swift start with 14 cases.

ASSAULT IS PLANNED ON THE HEIGHTS OF MOUNT RAINIER

FORT LEWIS, WA.--An allied expeditionary force is planning an assault on the snowy heights of Mount Rainier.

A cold weather survival training team from the 9th Infantry Division and members of a British Royal Air Force mountain rescue team will spend two weeks on the mountain starting August 14.

Ninth Division team chief, Captain Thomas A. Staadt, said the joint venture will involve climbs to Mt. Rainier's 14,414-foot crest by several routes, a hike around the mountain at the upper levels, and "maybe a summit conference or two."

He said several members of the Washington State Search and Rescue Council will also participate in the alpine survival training.

The Royal Air Force team's 17 officers and enlisted men are based at Leeming, England. They are sceduled to arrive on a C-130 aircraft August 10 at McCord Air Force Base.

The Britishers suggested the expedition after hearing about the survival training program that Captain Staadt and Sergeant James Nicholson have been presenting to school audience and other groups in the Pacific Northwest the past year.

Capt. Staadt said the purpose of the trip is to share knowledge and compare techniques, and added the fact that Mt. Rainier is named for an English admiral had nothing to do with it.

Motown

Headquarters moved out to W. Coast

LOS ANGELES, — Motown Record corporation is phasing out immediately its operations in Detroit, ending a more than ten years residence and is establishing its world-wide headquarters in Los Angeles where its expanding activities in the entertainment world can better reach its potential, according to the company's new Vice President and General Manager, Amos Wilder.

"It's just simply a matter of sound business judgment, economics and logistics which dictate this development," Wilder said.

He pointed out that the creative center of the entertainment world is on the West Coast and this is exactly the reason why practically every major recording company has relocated there.

"Our expansion into motion pictures as well as establishing new labels, such as MOWEST, make it mandatory for us to make the move at this time," Wilder said.

The executive pointed out that it was economically not feasible for Motown to maintain its full staff in Detroit while developing a major operation in Los Angeles because of inevitable duplication of functions.

However, Motown will continue to maintain Detroit-based recording studios and a creative staff.

"Our overall employment will be at an all-time high," Wilderpsaid.

Wilder added:

"Motown's obligation to its employees and their families call for it to positively maintain its competitive position in the industry. This is the only way to insure Motown's economic health and consequently the security of those who work for us. We now employ more blacks than any other record company in the world and we will continue to do so, operating from our headquarters on the West Coast which will allow us to lead the industry creatively."

Sex & The Black Male

Are black men sexually superior to white men? Dr. Alvin F. Pouissant, a black Harvard psychiatrist, examines some hard facts and fantasies about the legendary "black stud" in the August "Special Issue" of Ebony.

Says Pouissant:

"Black male sexuality has been enveloped in myths, fantasies, distortions and sterotypes. Popular literature alludes to black prowess, but sexual studies and reports provide few hard facts. Black for uncertain reasons have not been analyzed in the major sex studies and the common beliefs about black male sexual power cannot be confirmed or rejected on the basis of objective information."

Black men have been both glorified and victimized of their alleged sexual prowess. Many black men have been publicly castrated and murdered for supposedly raping white women. Emmett Till a 14 year-old black boy was murdered in Mississippi for "eyeball rape" (merely looking at a white woman); and predictable his killers were all freed.

It's no secret, reports EBONY, that in the ghetto black boys must learn early that they must indulge in sex in order to "prove their manhood." And like other boys of similar class backgrounds, they spend a lot of time talking and experimenting with sex. However, data are gradually appearing which shows that sexual enjoyment of low-income blacks may, unfortunately, be reduced because of frustrations built into a life of poverty.

In raising the rug off the sickness which surrounds the question of race and sex in this country, EBONY uncovers some interesting reasons which a black male might have for "sleeping white"--many of which aren't sexual reasons at all.

Another Time Another Place

Once on one of the bigger cities, in another country, in another world, there was a frail, little boy lived in one of the tenements in that city. He was not the rough and tough kid that you might expect to run the rooftops and yell at the people below.....he was not very strong at all. And on top of that he was usually was plagued with a very bad hack. Nobody knew if the cough was from the pollution in the air, from his poor diet or the ratbite that he suffered as a small child.

This little boy lived in the two room apartment that his mother rented for her and his ten brothers and sisters for one-hundred and ten dollars. They slept the best that they could and once a week they took turns emptying the buckets of exvretions that were in their floors' restroom facilities. The reason for the once a week trip was that the other families on their floor (six others) also had their day also and so they only had to take care of the buckets once a week.

He went to school and when he was seventeen, he went to live with one of his older sisters who had moved out and married. When this happened he was able to complete high-school and when he was twenty-two he graduated. (he did not have the proper schooling where he was living before and was put behind several grades. Many times he was tempted to quit school, but his sister would hear nothing of it. So, he graduated and he recieved a scholarship and went on to one of the better universities where he graduated with honors in the field of political science.

Then something very strange happeded.... he decided to share what he had learned and so he began to help people in the way that he thought he could help the most..... politics. He ran for office three times for the state congress and he was elected all three times. Then he ran for the National Congress and he was elected. There then followed a period of twelve years that he served his country in both the senate and the house; all the time gaining respect and admiration of both his peers and the people...

Then one year the party broke down and they voted him to be the candidate to run for the presidency of their country. The people turned out in great numbers and when the final balloting was over they had elected him by the greatest plurality that had ever been registered. It seemed that the people could not turn down a man that had worked so hard not just for his people (they were a minority) but for all the people in this country.

Yes, there were many strange things that had happened on this planet called Tara, but this was the strangest. You see, the whites on the planet were only a total of twenty-percent of the populace, and the blacks the same race of blacks that had first imported these white creatures for slaves had actually elected a white man as president of the Disunited States of Acirema.

MORAL: Through everyone's life passes someone or something that cannot be ignored, and at that time the person or persons involved have to make the decision to accept it for the good and betterment that it (they) may do or pass by it and continue on it the same way as before.

9Th Infantry Division Unit

FORT LEWIS, WA--Ninth Infantry Division Unit of Choice recruiters have moved a step closer to enlisting the area's educators to their cause.

The Division treated some 90 teachers, counselors and school administrators to lunch, a briefing and a look at training.

Brigadier General Rolland V. Heiser, assistant division commander, welcomed the Puget Sound area group, and Captain and Mrs. Robert A. Fazen presented a Huntley-Brinkley style briefing.

"Black Male Is Now The Natural Leader Of America"

"The liberated black male is now the natural leader to whom America must turn if it is to move past the style into the substance of a democratic society," says black psychiatrist, Dr. Price M. Cobbs, in the August "Special Issue" on EBONY. Dr. Price M. Cobbs, a psychiatrist in private practice in San Francisco, is the co-author (with Mr. William H. Grier) of the best seller, Black Rage. Says Cobbs, writing in EBONY: "It is a totally new experience for many black men to open their minds and see how they are being copied. In walk, in dress, in music, in language and social consciousness, the black male is supplying some vital missing links to America."

The noted black psychiatrist is convinced that the United States is witnessing the emergence of what he calls "The Liberated Black Male." The type of man Dr. Cobbs is describing has tapped within himself a wellspring of creative energy. This new found energy allows and even forces the black male to revitalize relationships with his fellow black men and to seek heightened emotional and intellectual pleasure with black women. Dr. Cobbs sees the liberated black male as measuring masculinity and manhood against black standards and competing only with himself. "The liberated black male is reborn, buck naked and brand new," says Cobbs.

The entire August "Special Issue" of EBONY deals incisively with the frustration and torment besetting the black male in America. The liberated black male has been to the mountaintop to search deep within himself for answers. In finding the secret to their own survival, the blakc man holds the key to survival to white America, and in the age of alienation and violence, America may finally have to ask us for help, reports EBONY.

Captain Trygve H. Culp A Machine Doctor

FORT LEWIS, WA.--Is there a Machine doctor in the place?

Quite a few, probable, but Captain Trygve H. Culp could well rate as top mechanical medicine man.

Capt. Culp has taken command of the 542nd Maintenance Company, a unit so versatile it fixes almost anything by tickets.

Included in its repair repertoire are wheeled vehicles, engineer light equipment, office machines, small arms, vehicle radios, canvas goods and "other items to numerous to mention."

The Company provides maintenance support to the non-divisional units at Fort Lewis.

It wasn't in a kissing booth but rather at the Second Annual Memphis Awards Presentation where singer-actress Leslie Uggams gave a special kiss to Academy-Grammy winner Isaac Hayes after he added several more awards to his honor list.

Apprentices increase 91 per cent since '68

WASHINGTON — The number of black youths in registered apprenticeship programs serviced by the U.S. Department of Labor has increased 91 per cent since 1968.

Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson said the number of black apprentices rose from 6,561 at the end of 1968 to 12,550 at the end of 1971.

During 1971, the number of nonwhite apprentices increased 13.6 per cent, from 11,045 to 12,550, a record high.

Black apprentices represented 6.7 per cent of the 186,236 apprentices registered as of December 31, 1971. A year earlier, they constituted 5.5 per cent or 11,045 out of 199,928 registered apprentices.

New minority apprentices are being fed into the apprenticeship system — conducted mostly by joint labor-management committees — by affirmative action programs. These were generated by the Secretary of Labor's revised regulations under Title 29, Code of Federal Regulations, Part 30, which sets standards for equal opportunity in apprenticeship.

Secretary Hodgson pointed out that outreach programs financed by the Labor Department and conducted by AFL-CIO Construction Trades Councils, the Workers Defense League, the Urban League, and several other similar organizations also have contributed to the new apprentice totals.

Marked increases for black apprentices also occurred in the construction trades where over half of all apprentices are employed. At the end of December 1971, out of 110,592 apprentices in the trades, 7,983 or 7.2 per cent were black.
